My passion for learning and exploration is what led me to pursue a career in education. At Uncommon Schools, I feel privileged to work with such an incredible team of educators. It is the joy that evolves from this work, my school, students, and colleagues that keeps me going!

On a trip to the Bronx Zoo, my parents encouraged me to take a picture with a raccoon, even though I was afraid of animals. I took the picture and at the last second, the raccoon turned and nipped my elbow. While I am not a fan of raccoons to this day, it did teach me to step out of my comfort zone and try new things.

My parents emigrated to the U.S. before I was born. Our family spent the summers traveling to national parks and historical sights. It became obvious over time that my parents were teaching us that the learning didn’t stop when the school-year ended, but shaped our lives all year long.

When I was in 6th grade, my father was diagnosed with cancer. Watching my dad taught me how important it is to live a meaningful life. My mom’s exemplary strength and loving presence made me realize how much power adults have in framing and impacting a child’s experience.
